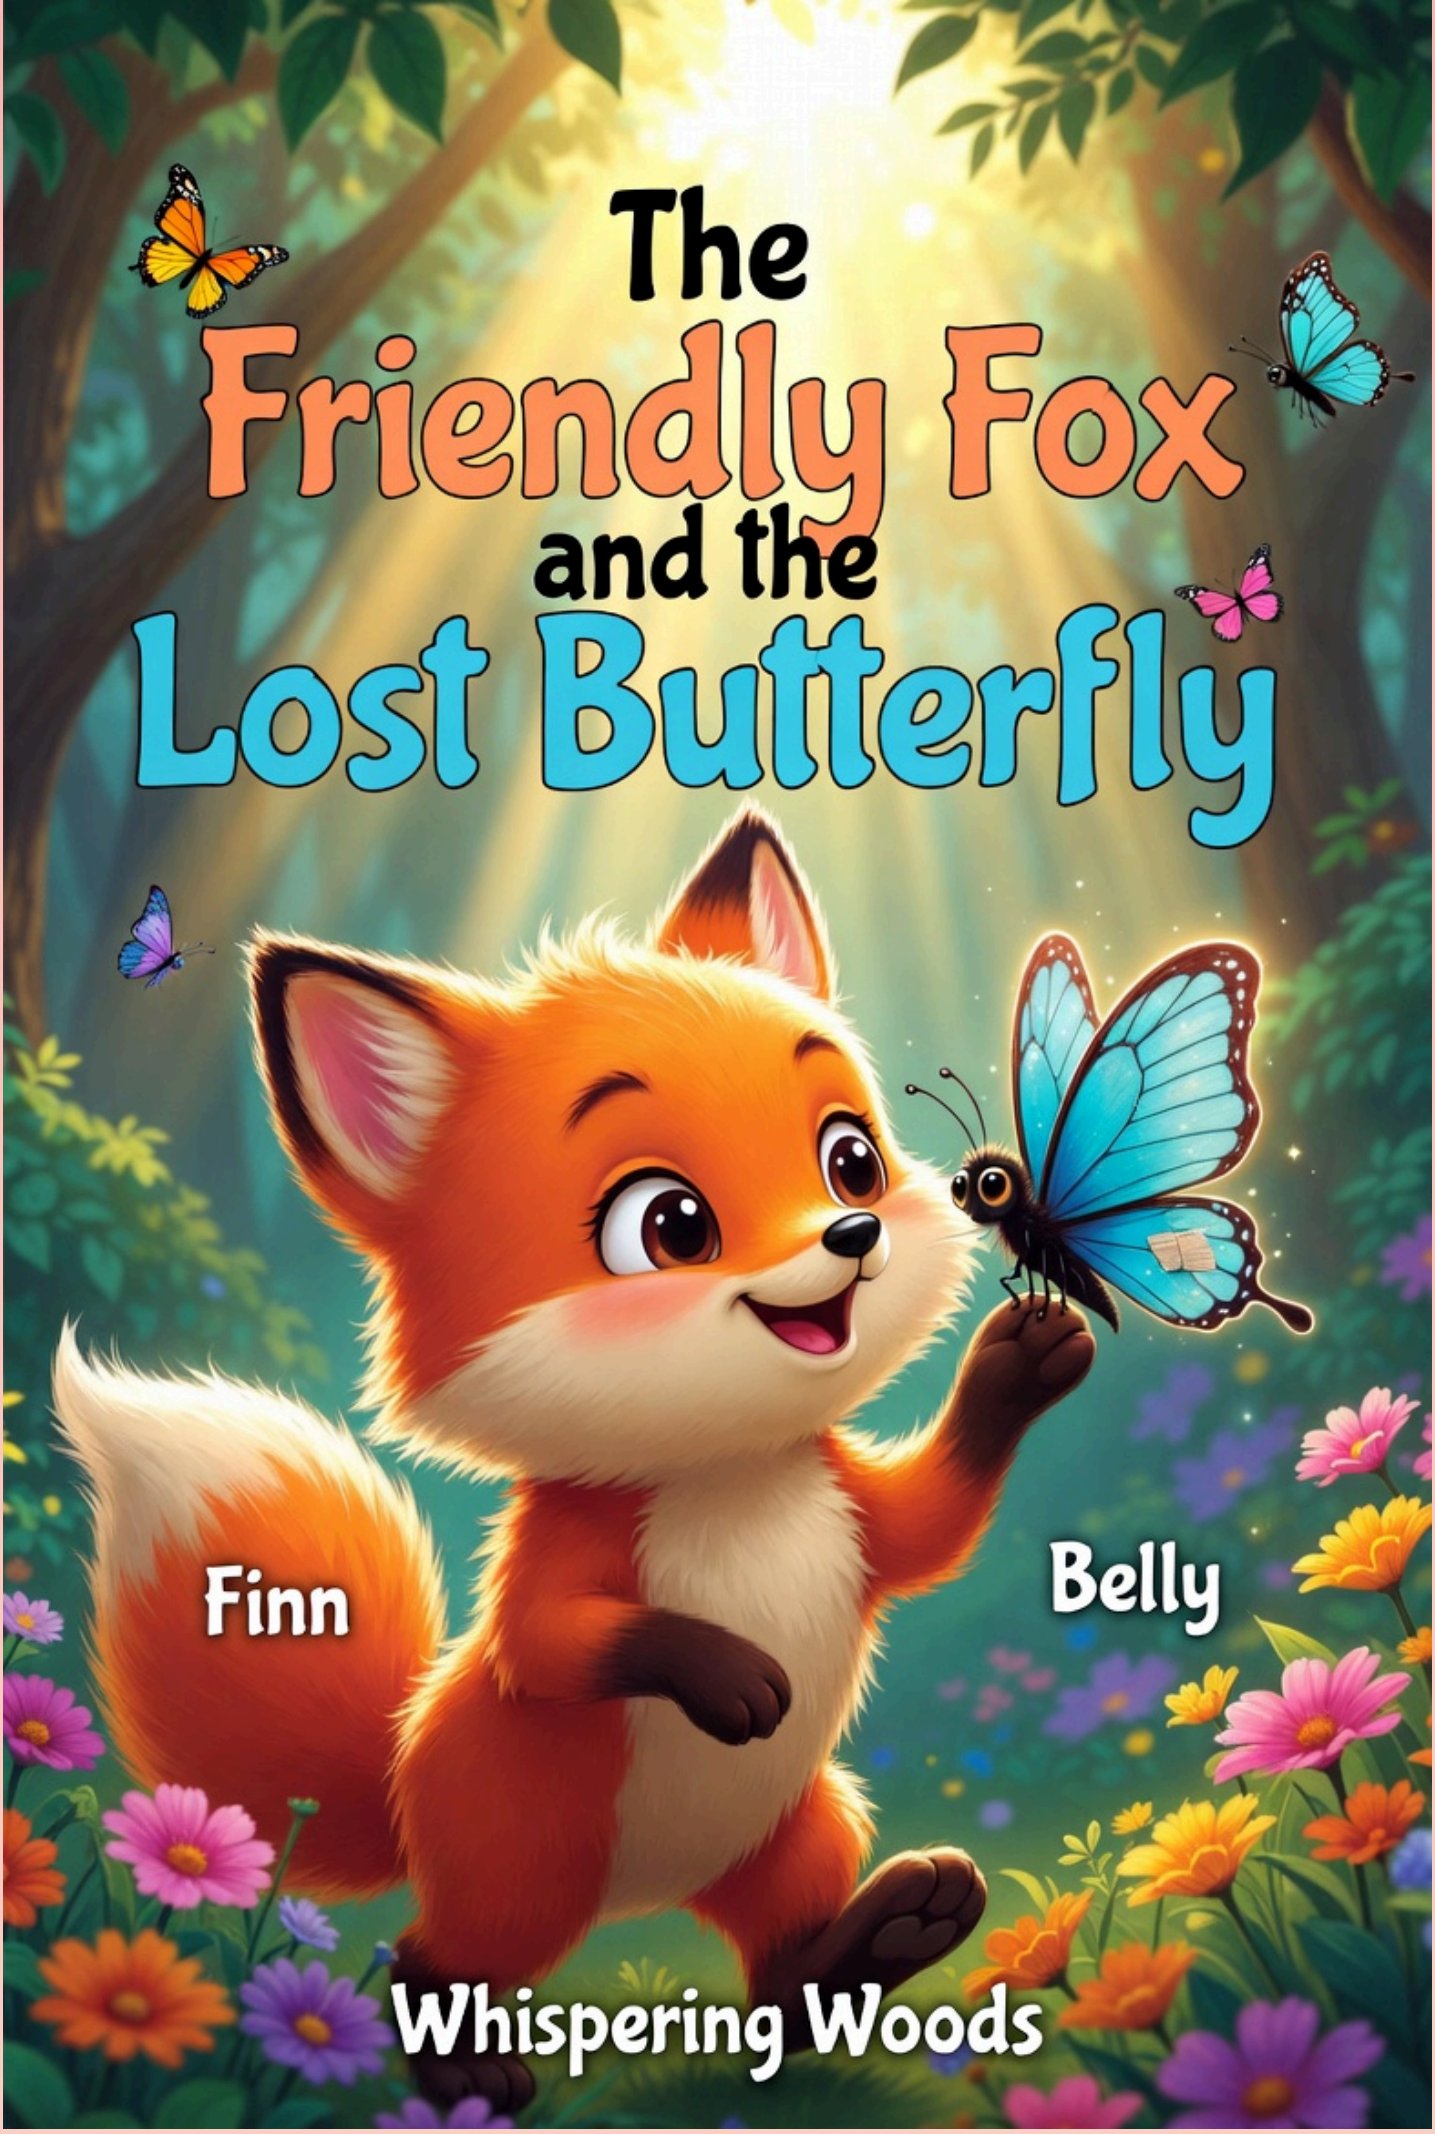
The Friendly Fox and the Lost Butterfly

A very short story for Grades 1–3

The Friendly Fox and the Lost Butterfly



Finn Belly

Whispering Woods

Once upon a time, in the sunny Whispering Woods, there lived a playful fox named Finn. Finn loved to jump over logs and chase his own tail. But sometimes he felt lonely. “I wish I had a friend to play with,” he sighed.

One bright morning, Finn was hopping along the path when he heard a tiny cry. “Help! Oh, help!”

On a tall flower sat a beautiful blue butterfly named Bella. Her wings sparkled like jewels, but one wing was bent and she could not fly.

“I was exploring the woods,” Bella said sadly, “and a big gust of wind knocked me down. Now I cannot fly home to my family.”

Finn's ears perked up. "Don't worry, little friend! I will help you."

Finn carefully let Bella climb onto his soft back. Together they trotted through the woods. They crossed a bubbly stream, climbed over shiny rocks, and said hello to a wise old owl. Along the way, Finn told funny jokes and Bella shared stories about flying high above the trees. They laughed and laughed!

At last they reached the meadow of healing flowers. Finn gently placed Bella on a bright yellow petal. The magic flower's sweet smell made Bella's wing strong again.

"Thank you, Finn!" Bella said, flapping her wings happily. "You are the kindest fox in the whole wide woods."

Finn smiled big. "And you are the best friend I ever had!"

From that day on, Finn and Bella played together every day. The Whispering Woods felt brighter and happier than ever.
